What is the job market like in Alaska

There are a wide variety of EMS employers within the state. Some fire departments, ambulance services, and medevac services utilize EMTs and or Paramedics. There are jobs in very remote communities as well as in Anchorage, the largest municipality in the state. Many communities use a combination of paid and volunteer responders.

What are the entry level wages?

Wages vary widely depending on location within the state.

Firefighter/EMTs	$36,000-42,000/yr
Firefighter/Paramedics	$37,080-46,000/yr
Non-fire Paramedics	$26,000-38,000/yr

Some agencies have significant pay raises after probationary period is completed.

Where can I find out about job opportunities?

When the State EMS Office is contacted about a job opening, the opening is posted on the EMS list server and on the web site discussion board. You can subscribe to the list server or enter the discussion board on the CHEMS web site www.chems.alaska.gov. Not all jobs are listed in these forums so those interested in employment can also contact potential employers directly.

Which EMS agencies should I contact for applications?

Anchorage Fire Department is the largest EMS provider in the state. Its web site is <http://www.ci.anchorage.ak.us/Services/Departments/Afd51/>. If interested, contact the Job Hotline at (907) 343-4451.

A list of EMS provider agencies is available for downloading from www.chems.alaska.gov

Where can I get more information on relocation?

The official State of Alaska web site has a section about relocating to Alaska. The link to the site is <http://www.dced.state.ak.us/tourism/relocating/relocation.htm>. Many local communities also have web sites that offer information about their communities.
